

'An unconscionable bargain': Quinn heirs sue

In what looks set to be one of the longest court cases in Irish history, was in crisis. Behind the scenes, the bank's senior management team was under colossal pressure. They knew

Quinn's daughters Aoife, Brenda, Colette and Cara outside the Four Courts last week for their High Court action against the IBRC, formerly Anglo

...ly unconcerned" about they understood the court failed to even ask their in securing various loan and securities at a time youngest, Brenda, was finishing up a qualification resources. ry said his side had se law to find an analo to the one facie, but could not p sition was "abs that they wo sk for loan up the b view of I just per h

Evidence ... and is expected to cost many millions.

Evidence map

There are eight senior counsel involved and monitors are dotted around the court for the presentation of soft copy documents (the discovery process threw up 160,000 records) managed by a company called TrialView. Solicitors in the body of the court taking notes included Michael Stain...

THE IRISH TIMES

Sun, Mar 17, 20

NEWS SPORT BUSINESS OPINION LIFE & STYLE CULTURE

Courts > High Court Supreme Court Criminal Court Coroner's Court Circuit Court

Quinn children unknowingly put 'heads in the noose' for €415m liability

Counsel for five siblings says Anglo Irish Bank 'not just a bad bank, it was the worst bank'

© Tue, Mar 12, 2019, 12:39 Updated: Tue, Mar 12, 2019, 13:18

Mary Carolan

Quinn's children, Aoife, Brenda, Ciara, Colette and Seán Jr, at the Four Courts on Tuesday. Photograph: ... courts

Seán Quinn's five adult children unknowingly "put their heads in the noose" for a liability of more than €415 million – €83 million each – as a result of ...

The Sunday Business Post

March 17-18, 2019

businesspost.ie

Price €3.00

See you in Coppers

Supermac's McDonagh eyes up legendary nightclub

page 7

Anglo cut and pasted loan documents, Quinns claim

- Family say their signatures were photocopied by the bank
- Bank counters that family knew what they were doing

BY FRANCESCA COMYN

Anglo Irish Bank used unauthorised 'cut and paste' signatures on a €1 billion loan facility, according to new claims made in court by the family of former billionaire Seán Quinn, once Ireland's richest man.

The Quinns, who deny liability for Anglo loans of up to €2.34 billion raised by the bank apparently used "transcripts of documents and photocopied signatures without their authorisation.

The claims form part of the family's epic dispute with Irish Bank Resolution Corporation (IBRC), formerly Anglo Irish Bank, which opened before the Commercial Court last week.

The hearing is due to last six months and is expected to cost millions.

We should allow 'near total freedom' for midrise development

